I. COUNCIL COMMENT

Mrs. Angelou said they got their first vaccine for COVID 19 and they feel pretty good. It was a smooth process at the Schottenstein Center.

Mr. Renner said thank you to the Mayor and Mr. Crawford for the service of the snow warriors. They're doing a great job.

Ms. Bowers thanked the Mayor for the proclamations. She was happy to see in the Mayor's report the item about technology development for Council. She is hopeful there will be a discussion on use of technology at the next Committee of the whole meeting on this topic. She shared information from Judge Carl Aveni: Fifty-three years ago today, public sanitation workers Echol Cole and Robert Walker were crushed to death in the compactor they were operating in Memphis, Tennessee. Black sanitation workers had complained to the city for years about unsafe working conditions, unfair wages, racial discrimination and unfair labor practices aimed at keeping them from unionizing. The deaths of Cole and Walker on Feb. 1, 1968 were as wholly avoidable as they were gruesome, and the workers had had enough.

On February 11, more than half of them voted to perform a work stoppage, and join the AFSCME. They were directly supported by the United Rubber Workers Local 186, which represented the largest group of black union members in Memphis. As the strike gained momentum over the following weeks, it attracted the attention and support of the civil rights movement, including the NAACP and the Rev. Martin Luther King.

Dr. King flew to Memphis on March 18, speaking to thousands of strikers and supporters and drawing the national eye to the cause. All of which culminated in a massive public protest on March 28, 1968, led by a grassroots local civil rights group, local union leaders, local ministers, the NAACP and Dr. King. When the protest was disrupted and ended prematurely by Memphis police, it was rescheduled for April 5. Which is why Dr. King was standing on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis on April 4, 1968.

A motion was made by Bowers, seconded by Leeseberg, to enter into executive session for the reason stated on the agenda. The motion carried by the following vote:
