Bowers asked about abated residential properties and are they evaluated. Strum said yes, those are in pre-1994 areas and not filed with auditor but are inspected; ensure no code violations or issues. Bowers asked about a mechanism for determining economic development for business spending due to residential abatements. Strum said the city does have the Community Reinvestment Area Housing Commission (CRAHC) board which determines spending capacity; they meet annually, usually in December.

Leeseberg stated that Council also received an email this afternoon, asked Bowers if she would address it.
